

Senglea Marittima 2011 organised by the Isla local Council will be held on 17-18-19 June, 2011, at limelight locations within Isla. The council organises the festival to safeguard the town's socio-historical and cultural heritage while raises awareness of the potential of the locality, which can be developed further. Thanks to its fortifications, historic buildings, living history and strong links with the sea, there is so much that can be discovered in Senglea. Thus the audience will embark on a voyage of discovery.

A focal point of activities will actually be the unique Macina, which will host static exhibitions, audio-visual displays, lectures and performances over three days. On Friday night the main church's square will revive the Knight's era through the ambience and happenings purposely set up for the festival. The main square (4th September Square) and its surroundings will depict the pre World War II culture and environment; the re-enacted World War II fear and destruction; and the post war slow battered regeneration. The latter will be re-lived by the audience.

Saturday, 18th June is jam-packed with different activities as from the morning including displays, re-enactments, parades, band marches, exhibitions and more. Along this day Senglean entities and the past EDEN award-winning localities including Nadur, Santa Lucia Hamlet of Kercem and Mellieha will be participating with street and corner arts from the centre right down towards the seafront.

The final morning and afternoon (Sunday 19 June, 2010) will be entirely dedicated to marine activities, water sports and displays, and the renown Macina re-enactment at the Macina itself and its waterfront surroundings.
